

DAVID AND MARTHA REESE,

Only Survivors of Six Original Settlers of Logan.

Herewith presented are the portraits of David and Martha Reese, the only survivors of the original band of six who first camped on the site at present occupied by the city of Logan. Mr. Reese is 79 years of age, and his health is somewhat improved of late. Mrs. Reese is 76 years young and is strong and vigorous in mind and body. She tells entertainingly of their first camping place on the banks of the Little Logan early in April, 1839. "There were besides my husband and myself, Griffith Charles, Sidney Dibble and wife, and Abraham Caldwell. We camped on the hill where the old carding mill used to be, near the Deseret mills. We had forgotten to bring a supply of those new-fangled things called matches, and had no way to make a fire. Finally Sidney Dibble got an idea. He gathered a little rubbish in his hands and then fired his pistol into it, causing the dry stuff to burn. You may be sure we preserved coals from that fire until we got more matches."

Mr. and Mrs. Reese now reside in their comfortable home on First West street in the town they helped found, and were prominent in the parade given in honor of the pioneers of Cache at the celebration in Logan on Thursday.

LESTER F. BLACKNER,
Business Manager.

T. E. ALLEY,
Editor.

Editor James E. Alley and Manager Lester Blackner promise the classicst Unionian ever produced by any junior class at the university. Every effort has been made to make this year-book the consummation of all attempts to set up a model for classes that are to follow. More cuts and drawings will appear in this book than in any of the former annuals. The class of 1903 established a precedent of binding the year book in flexible, undressed leather. The 1910 book will adhere to this precedent, and will be found in blue leather, with the lettering in silver, those being the class colors.

In other years the classes have had trouble disposing of all of their books, and have therefore met with expense. The juniors this year have spared no pains in making up the book, but have only ordered a limited number, and only holders of coupons will be able to secure them.

Editor Alley says: "Every page is made as attractive as is possible to make it. Everything is to be read and will be read. The book is written to suit the tastes of the students."

CHINA'S FOUR RELIGIONS.

China has four state established religions, and in each the emperor exercises sacerdotal functions. Twice a year the emperor as "son of heaven" worships before the tablet of Shang Ti or supreme heaven in accordance with the ancient imperial monotheism. Twice a year he burns incense before the tablets of his ancestors in accordance with Confucianism. Twice a year he sacrifices to the gods of Taoism and twice a year to the image of Buddha. The ancient primitive religion of China is monotheistic, but this direct worship was regarded as too sublime for the people, so that it became reserved for the emperor alone as the "son of heaven" and as priest of the nation. The people on their part worshipped their ancestors, and it was this ancestral religion which Confucius identified himself with and reformed. The old superstitions rejected by Confucius were absorbed by Taoism, which is polytheistic and the religion of the populace. Then Buddhism came into China about 65 A. D., and, like the other three religions, became state supported and state endowed.
